The condition of the working classes in this country is a subject of intruse interest to all think-ing men; but it is profitable as well as amoning to transfer our attention sometimes to the same por-tions of society in other countries. In Germany, their "band workers," and the questions of freedom, of industry, and general instruction are as warmly discussed as at home. We have now be-fore as a little volume by the philosopher and his torian, Zechokke, which, is the form of a fictitious marrative, treats very fully of the status of the machanic in Fatherland; and we are tempted to cull a few extracts which may afford the reader

His son Jonas trotted on foot beside s in all his journeys, dining like his father on bread and water, and sleeping in barns or stables. But when the boy was old enough, he was turned of to pick up his own subsistence like the red-breasts, the sparrows, and the woodpeckers. We now ocuse hastily to the third generation; for Jonat had a see called Veit, who was a first apprenticed to his father, and then sent to travel as a journeyman. The patriarch had had no education at all; Jones had soutched at his just as opportunities permitted: but Veit went regularly through the brief and practical corriculum fitted for a tradesman's son. He was consequently, better informed and more rafined than either his there names and persons are not feebly individualized. The father, the son, and the grandson gaining a therough insight into the branches constand well out upon the canvas; and, while the nected with his own business, that honest Jonas was quite puzzled. Where did the buy get all family likeness is strictly preserved from general these notions?" said he. "He did not get them from me, I am sure." Veit had a bad opinion of the travelling custom, and for these reasons:
"How should these men, most of them badly brought up, attain to any greater perfection it their business, if they have left home and school without any preparation for it? No one can un derstand, if his understanding has not been developed. From one publican they go to another; everywhere they find the old common track—the mechanical, mindless life of labor, just as in the very first place to which they were sent to learn lid," quoth Daddy Thaddeus: "this is the Look for sleet and elderberries, rose practice. THE PUBLITIVE AND HIS PURSUEES

BY A. S. HARTIN.

List to the Winding of the born, Its secests wake the sleepy more, Who shakes his dowy brow! Three hunters, and a dozen bounds Seem merry, as with graceful bounds The horses neigh and bow.

What I will they seek the timid fawn, Or will they seek the boar, Or sing, whose head with bony breek The bounds and housers both may crush, And stain the field with gore?

No! 'tie a slave they go to hunt; The door's track, or the wild boar's grunt, No music them afford; The yelping bounds, the morting borne Proclaim in accente, loud and source. Creation barts its lord.

And bark ! they now are on his track, The whooping hunters with their pack Afright the silent woods. And now the slave, with nimble foot Seeks out the dog-deleding root,"

And casts away his goods.

His bundle throws away, and then His coat and hat, that they may lend Speed to his fleeing limbs, And now his exthe blade firm be groups. His belt he tighter round him clasps, And through the air he swime.

But still the hunters nigher come, And make the herds foreake their home To greet the busy road.

The horses swift as wind do fir. And still the hunters madly cry, "Hunt, hunt him, outch him, "Brood !"

To save him from a horrid death, To reach a deep defile. His prayer forgotten, new he begs Still nearer helpers-feet and legs-Five minutes count a mile

He praye to God to lend him breath,

His prayer is answered -there he stands, His seythe-blade gleaming in his hands, And murder in his eye.

He waits their coming; "Brood" comes first, And human scent but whete his thirst, Poor dog ! he's doomed to die:

For now the first descending stroke Cuts off his head, and ere he spoke, Another dog's head fell. Twas by a creek, and as they died, He rudely flung them in the tide, That none the tale might tell.

The hunters lighting, one by one, Sought out their dogs, whose cry was done, And now dismounts the third; The rushing stream, their whistling tone, The lengthened winding of the horn Was all that could be heard.

See now that marrow pass they tread: And soon are numbered with the dead. By this determined slave;

The first two by the seythe blade fall, The last by fright and rife ball, Is hurried to his grave.

Thus were these souls to Hades driven, Who dared defy the laws of Heaven.

Thus may it ever be: The man that sheds his brother's blood, Or by the lash, or by his "Brood," Should pay the penalty.

The slave who rouched for the truth of this thrilling story once gave me an occular demonstration of his courage, by holding three or four hundred at bay in the city of columbus, (i.e., where

EMERSON'S MAGAZINE

Dutnam's Alonthin.

The Union of EMERSON'S MAGAZINE and PUTNAM'S MONTHLY has given to 15W cined idented work a circulation second to but one similar publication in the country, and has mened sublication of literary and artistic talest pro-a combination of literary and artistic talest pro-ably unrivaled by any other magazine a the world. During the first month, the sale of the trade and demand from subscribers exceeded by 000 copies, and the numbers already issued of the consolidated work are universally conceded to have surpassed, in the richness of their literiacontents and the beauty and profuseness of the pictorial illustrations, any magazine ever before issued from the American press. Encouraged by these evidences of favor, the publishers have determined to commence the new volume in Jacobar, with still additional attractions, and to ofer such with still additional attractions, and to offer such inducements to subscribers as cannot fail to place it, in circulation, at the head of American Magazines. With this view they now assessme the circulation of the control of the c following splendid programme. They have per-chased that superb and costly steel plate cagraring and will present a copy of it to every three della subscriber for the year 1858. It was engraved at a coost of over $6,000, by the late celebrated A. I. Dick, from the original of Raphæl Morghes after Leonardo Da Vinci, and is the largest steelplan engraving ever executed in this country, least hree times the size of the ordinary three-do engravings. The first impressions of this engraving are held at $10, and it was the intention of the artist that none of the engravings should ever be offered for a less sum than $5, being richly worth that amount. Thus every three-dollar subscribes will receive the Magazine one year-chesp at $1-and receive the Magazine one year—cheap at N—and this aplendid engraving, richly worth 10, thus getting for 43 the value of 48.

We shall commence striking off the segraving immediately, yet it can hardly be expected that impressions of so large a plate can be taken if the contract of the fast as they will be called for by subscriber. We shall, therefore, furnish them in the order is which subscriptions are received. Those who desire is obtain their engraving early, and from the tru impressions, should send in their subscription without delay. The engraving can be sent a rollers, by mail, or in any other manner, as reb-scribers shall order $10,000 IN WORKS OF ART.

In addition to the superh engraving of "Tas Last Supram," which will be presented to every three-dollar subscriber for 1808, the publishers have completed arrangements for the distribution on the 25th day of December, 1858, of a series of splendid works of art, consisting of one handred rich and rare Oil Paintings, valued at from $100 to $1,000 each. Also, 2,000 magnificent Steel Plate Engravings, worth from $3 to $5 each, making in all, over THREE THOUSAND GIFTS, worth
